Harrison for Municipal Ownership.
The Chicago River Improvement Association a few days ago submitted a plan to Mayor Harrison for the lowering of the tunnels for which the street car companies are willing to pay $1,500,000 provided their franchise would be extended. The Mayor refused the bait and said: "Four things I shall demand in dealing with the question of extending the grants to the traction companies. They are: compensation for the grants, reduction of fares, provision for municipal ownership and reference of the contract to the people for their approval. The amount of compensation to be determined after full consideration, and the rate of fares to be fixed in a like manner. The terms by which the city shall acquire the traction properties also to be reached after fair allowance is made for the rights of the owners of the traction companies. When that much is done I shall demand that the whole matter be referred to the people of Chicago at the next election for their approval or rejection."

Krause's Headache Capsules are splendid; never failed to cure my headaches and save a world of suffering. I am recommending them every where. The druggists of Aberdeen, Hecla and Britton, Marshall county, all promised me to get them in stock. I give you address to every sufferer I meet. I am going to Colorado in June, and I shall do you good among the miners, nearly all of whom suffer from headaches in that high altitude. Yours, etc.,

Dang Dingley Duties.

Congressman Dingley of Maine was chairman of the way and means committee in the 55 congress and as such his name stands for the tariff bill then passed—just as the Wilson bill or the McKinley bill honored those chairman in previous sessions.

The Dingley tariff was designated "An Act to provide revenue for the government and to encourage the industries of the United States."

When a tariff is put upon any article it must be either to raise a revenue from it or to encourage its production in the United States by excluding competition from abroad. Manufacturers demand this tariff, but farmers see no need of it, altho' they are equally protected by the Dingley bill.

In order to keep foreign cattle out of our markets the tariff protects the home animal by $3.75 each—if not value over $14.

Swine are excluded by $1.50 a head; and while the republican party glories in "rooters," such as Lord Sailsbury, it wants no hog but Hanna to tear up the American earth.

Horses and mules are shut out of the local crib by a tariff of $30 a head. This tariff is so protective to the great western ranges that horse breeders are encouraged to sell horses at from $3 to $5 a head, breaking our local dealers at that price.

The farmers grains are amply encouraged to grow by Dingley: barley, 30c; buckwheat, 15c; corn, 15c; oats, 15c; rye, 10c; wheat, 25c; onions, 40c; potatoes, 25c; apples, 25c; peaches, plums, cherries and quinces are the same.

Of what use are all such tariffs? None whatever except to permit the spellbinder to point to his "No. 9 Defender," a campaign book, and show how republicans induced prosperity to the hayseeds and pumpkin huskers of this prosperous land by protection from the pauper labor of Europe. [Great applause.]

If there any one thing beyond another that the Kansas farmer fears it is importation of straw.

But the republican party stands between him and that danger by imposing a duty of $150 a ton on straw. Therefore he need not fear the manufacture of straw men from the foreign product. The home industry in that commodity is bountiful enough, and of such are our legislators, congress and the White House.

Another disaster is threatening the sturdy American farmer, and that is importation of fresh milk from foreign lands.

Think of the disaster to the teats of American cows if the pauper cows of Europe or the lean kine of Pharaoh and India squirted their lactical fluid across desert sands and wastes of seas to paralyze the infant industry of this cradled continent!

But the Dingley tariff makes woe of that impending industry by imposing a duty of two cents a gallon on fresh milk.

In order to encourage the industry of the United States to make hay while the sun shines, a tariff of $4 a ton is imposed on hay.

Thus are reserved to the home market a strawman for president, and the other sort for secretary of state.

Dingley put a tariff of 5 cents a dozen on eggs.

Otherwise the American hen, now enjoying shorter hours of labor and a full dinner pail, would be compelled to compete with the pauper hens of Europe, thereby in time becoming chicken hearted and destitute of sand in its craw. With this protective tariff it may perch, high, eat three meals a day, send its brood to school cackle at the Wilson bill, moult its feathers for Sundays and spend its evenings at home with a happy family.

Nothing shows to better advantage the conservative influence of the republican party than its idea of what ought to enter the American ports free of duty.

We have space to list only a few. First of importance, it occurs to us, is dragon's blood. Blessings upon the republican party for giving us dragon's blood free of duty.

We are satisfied to gulp down foreign dragon's blood because the domestic article is difficult to attain. We have sent forth numerous modern Thesuses to slay the great red dragon of Wall street, but so far we fail to fatten on its ruddy gore.

Another free thing is dividend, then which nothing is more useful.

Fish skins are free of tariff, hence all of us wear that kind of fur.

Manna is also free—but the republican party is unable to collect duty from Heaven should it again try to appease the hunger of men.

Leaches are free. Foreign aid to suck our blood is necessary—China and the Philippines extra.

Paul finds the gates of Castle Garden swinging inward.

Rags are free. The domestic industry in rags is deemed adequate to need no protection.

Skeletons enter our ports free: Our own closets and alleys are so full, foreign importation cannot dismay our trade in bones.

Spunk is free.

We need more spunk from abroad.

Turtles are free—properly so in order to cross them with the mossbacks at home.

But read the schedule and dang the Dingley duties and his free list.

Read the American republican tariff for protection and revenue, and if you can read it unmoved you can calmly look at your babe drown in a swill barrel and smile when it gasps to death—Norton Champion.

Keep An Eye On Congress.

The people will have to keep an eye on congress this winter. They may not be able to save their property, but at least they can see the burglars carrying off the bag.

There has been much talk of the repeal of the war taxes, and the idea has been popular. But "war taxes" is a comprehensive term. Some of the war taxes are needlessly burdensome and ought to be repealed; but others are good and ought to be kept. The Republican plan, of course, is to repeal the good ones and keep the bad. We are told, in particular, that the "unproductive inheritance taxes" are to be dropped.

Now there is no reason why the inheritance tax should be unproductive. On the contrary, they ought to be the most productive in the government's whole assortment, if they are honestly enforced.

People need not drink beer, or smoke tobacco, or use stamped paper unless they choose, but everybody must die, and all the property of the country must be transferred once in every generation in such a way as to be within the reach of inheritance taxes.

The present inheritance tax law of the United States applies only to personal property, and its rate on legacies passing by direct descent is small, but even so, the tax collectable from the estates of two millionaires who died recently on one day could hardly be less than a quarter of a million dollars, and might run up into the millions. If all the estates of decedents were vigilantly followed up the revenues drawn from them would be enormous.

Let the documentary stamp taxes go. To fine people for the use of checks, rent receipts, leases, mortgages and insurance policies is a needless restraint on business. But keep the inheritance taxes. They are almost the only part of our entire national system that attempts to make wealth pay its share of the expenses of the government.—Chicago American.

The Cruelty of Partisanship.

The election is now over and the leaders—notably the postmaster editors—of the republican party seem intoxicated with delight at the success at the polls. Their onslaught on the great leader of the parties opposing the republican party in the campaign just closed is such as might be hurled at Herr Most or most any other anarchist of the slums of New York.

There is no concession of an honesty of purpose for any man opposed to the policy of the republican administration, by these presumed leaders of the party.

The principle advocated by Mr. Bryan and his supporters, most ridiculed during the campaign and now referred to sneeringly by some of our brethren of the press in this state, is what they term "dishonest money." Yet they seem to forget that scene in the United States senate, when their ever-idolized Ingalls held aloft the denarius of Caesar between the thumb and fore finger, and said: "Money is the creation of law."

They seem to forget that he was afterward the candidate of their party for the United States senate, and every one of them loud in their praise of the imperious and eloquent Ingalls.

They have forgotten that Senator Plumb was one of the very leaders in the fight for free coinage of silver.

They have forgotten the masterful speeches of Jno. A. Anderson in congress on this question, or the speeches of Col. Phillips and the platform on which he ran for congress and which was written at Olay Center by the republican party. The fallacy of the republicanism of the west at that time or of the supporters of Mr. Bryan now has not been proven, because it has not been put to the test.

In every campaign it is the object and avowed purpose of every speech and every editorial to have the voter follow his judgment and vote as his conscience dictates. As a matter of fact one cannot commit a more unpardonable sin, in the eyes of the uncompromising partisan, than to do that very thing.

Patriotism and conscience count for nothing if it involves infidelity to party.—Concordia Kansan.

Republicans have insisted all along that "fusion" was detrimental to both parties that free. Just as they have convinced as they were right, they propose to disprove their sincerity by knocking out "forever" the possibility of fusion, by law. Every republican paper and politician is howling for a law to prevent fusion and the legislature will doubtless pass such a law at the next session.

Storm in Colorado.

Last Thursday night a terrible storm struck in the vicinity of Colorado Springs, Colorado City and Manitou.

Much damage was done to property in the three cities and many people injured but no lives lost. The Durkee Block in Colorado Springs was almost completely destroyed and several other buildings unroofed and otherwise damaged. The barber shop of Harry Stearns in Colorado City was crushed by a falling tree, and the building upon which Meers Hall, Beilharz, Lowe and Dutcher were at work was blown down. The wind was not a twister but blew straight down the sides of Pikes Peak and thence eastward.

Two years ago Mr. Reeder lost his county by 147 votes to Mr. McCormick, and the pop organ down the street said it was because of the unpopularity of his "manager." There has been no change in the personnel of Mr. Reeder's committee this year, and we suppose the fact that Mr. Reeder carried the county this year by 423 plurality, a gain of 570 over his vote of two years ago, would be taken as an indication that his "manager" was in a little better favor with the people.—Dispatch, Nov. 8.

Reeder received 19,644; Dykes, 15,076 and Mr. Scott 5,409. It will be seen therefore that if the opposition to Reeder had not been divided he would have been defeated by 841 votes. Two years ago the combined majority against Mr. Reeder in the district is less than 300. This year the opposition majority was more than 500 greater. Two years ago the manager's influence was confined to Phillips county. This year it spread out through the district. Oh yes Reeder's manager is O. K.

The Irl Hicks 1901 Almanac.

Whatever may be said of the scientific causes upon which the Rev. Irl H. Hicks bases his yearly forecasts of storm and weather, it is a remarkable fact that specific warning of every great storm, flood, cold wave and drought, have been plainly printed in his now famous almanac for many years. The latest startling proof of this fact was the destruction of Galveston, Texas, on the very day named by Prof. Hicks in his 1900 almanac, as one of disaster along the gulf coasts. The 1901 Almanac, by far the finest most complete and beautiful yet published, is now ready. This remarkable book of near 200 pages, splendidly illustrated with charts and half-tone engravings, goes as premium to every subscriber who pays one dollar a year for Prof. Hicks' Journal, Word And Works. The Almanac alone is sent prepaid for only 25c. Order from Word and Works Publishing Company, 2201 Locust Street, St. Louis, Mo., or from the HERALD.
